“ The day I met my kitten, was the beginning of a life long intense, beautiful and solid friendship. We immediately clicked. I remember telling her that her eyes were so beautiful. The lightest of sky blues I had ever seen. Her hair was blonde but she was on her way to dying it black. Her style was the same as mine with her own twist. We were the outcast skater chicks . All through high school we stuck together. We lived next door to one another but we're rarely in our own homes separated. I didn't feel right without her by my side. She became a part of me. We moved in with one another later down the road after I had my two boys and she had just had her beautiful daughter. She was my sanity in every way. We never lost contact and always knew where one another was. There came a point where I needed her and she was right there. I had been abused by a man and suffered from severe ptsd. It was my kitten who helped me get back to myself again. She gave me strength when I couldn't push myself, she took a breath when I couldn't breath, she saw the light when I couldn't see.... she saved me. I miss her more then words could ever express my heart is no longer whole... I love you twin kitten and I miss you terribly.
